YEAR BOOK

1985

Pride and Commitment

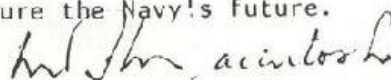

It is with great pleasure that I wish you "Good luck and God's speed" in this momentous year which marks the 75th Anniversary of Naval Service of Canada. It is a year that all of us will remember in the times to come and God willing we may be present for the hundredth anniversary when we can look back on 25 good years and remember the 75th.

In cold fact, anniversaries mark the annual occurrence of a specific date. It is only in the honouring of an anniversary that it has meaning. Principal among the reasons for honouring this anniversary is to permit us to reflect on the past and then to apply the lessons of the past in determining a future. As we reflect on our Navy's history over the last 75 years it would be an understatement to say "it has not been easy". We can however reflect upon it with justifiable pride in achievement in the face of difficulty. In the Navy's lean times and good times in both war and peace--in success and in adversity--the Naval Reserve has always played a full and distinguished role.

At this point in time new ships are on the horizon for the Fleet and there is talk of a new challenging task for the Reserves in the field of Mine Countermeasures.

Prospects appear favourable. Despite this however, believe me when I tell you the future is unlikely to be any easier than the last 75 years. To succeed in the years ahead will require the fortitude and determination and commitment so well demonstrated in the past, to continue with even greater vigor.

That is the challenge to us all--firstly to conduct ourselves so that we may always have due pride in our achievement and secondly to continue to make the commitment which will ensure the Navy's future.

During our training, due to our limited and ever-decreasing number, we were forced to seek companionship with members of the land element (RESO). They had various and sometimes perverse effects on our characters. Below we can be seen at a softball game. (the fun never stops at CFB Borden)

Baseball is a thinking man's game

Midget Baseball lives

The RESO influence went so far as to convince us, and many others, to change genders just to get a couple of beers. It seems that Borden drives a person to do just about anything for a drink.

THE OBSTACLE COURSE

The most challenging part of our extensive physical program was the obstacle course. It provided some very major obstacles to members of the course. Highlights include a 30 ft. net structure. It involved climbing 30 ft. and then crawling across a wide net so that you could get down. They assured us we wouldn't fall through. Another highlight was a 25 ft. wall that had to be climbed with the aid of a rope. (Sue just couldn't make it on this one). All in all it was fun and under the watchful eye of WO Frank we managed to survive.

The instructors of our courses are conspicuously absent from this yearbook. We do not have any pictures, so we thought we would draw some (besides this space was empty). Lt. Pat O'Brien was our Course Director and Yves Nadeau was our instructor. Please don't take offence to the drawings.

The editors of this section of the year book were honoured at the International Journalism Awards banquet. Seen here accepting the award for their outstanding contribution to the NROC yearbook are... guess who? In their acceptance speech they thanked the other members of the course for their generous contributions; thanks alot guys...we did it without you!

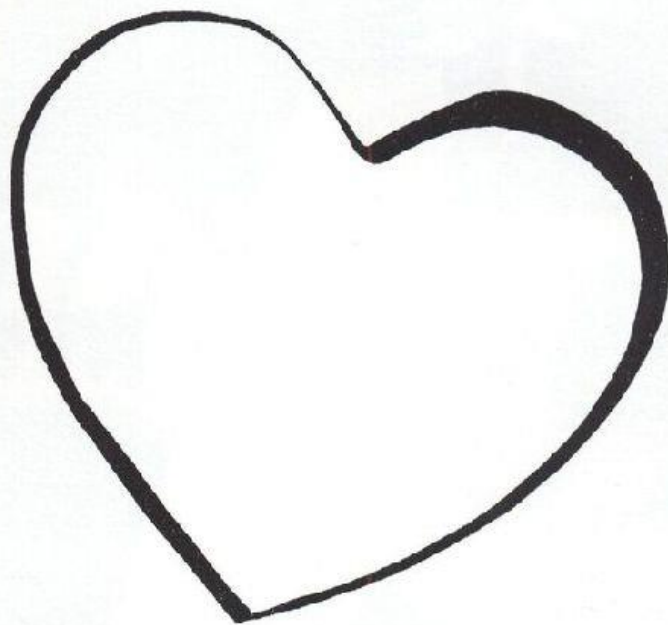

Due to the limited space provided, they couldn't possibly include all of the numerous submissions they received from their classmates.

 as the sing song of Lt.
 Dearman's daily salty dip began to lull us to sleep and we could feel our eyelids begin to droop our minds began to muse upon the four months that would follow this first week,
 -wondering what it would bring.
 There is nothing left to wonder about now. We all found out for sure that a triangle is a triangle is a triangle. We also discovered that taking a sheer squat while sniffing the ground with the mark difficult. Taking a fix could be rather difficult too when you whip

Carla managed to lose her hospitalization card, have twins, a hysterectomy, and tea at the Empress while being ignored by a deaf waitress all in one weekend.

While Loly poo and Artemis were getting it on Lyn managed to walk into a wall and give herself a concussion. She said it was because she had never ridden in an ambulance before and that she'd try anything once. We didn't find that hard to believe.

Carla ponders the many advantages of green sheeting.

Are you sure we're there Jill?

After insulting Bruce all summer Elaine has contracted Sergeant-Major Vincent to assassinate him. Subsequently she's taking off to become Don Rickles' personal writer.

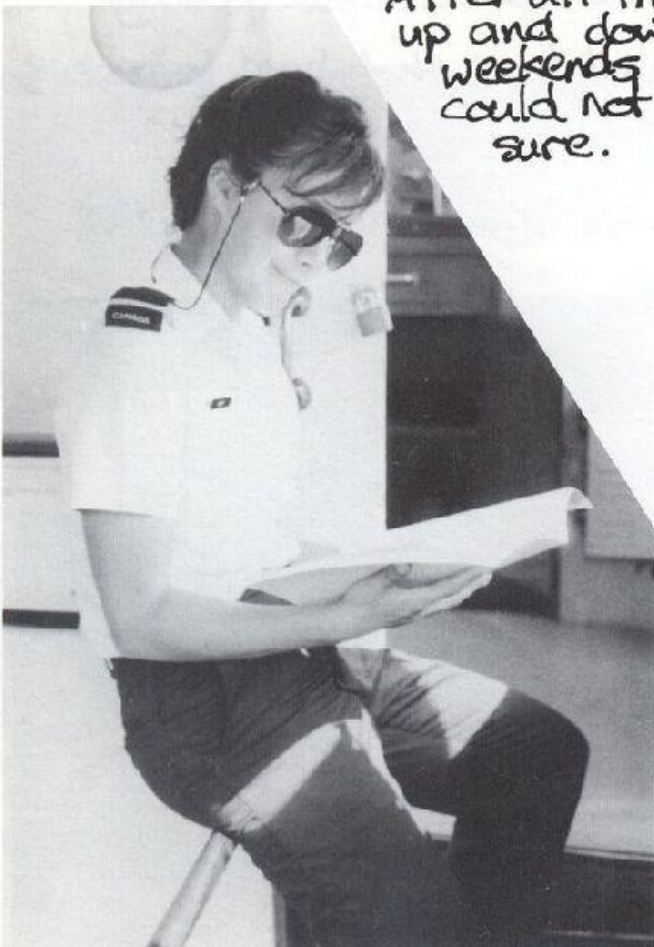

Denise was the only one of us who managed to wangle some time off - but there was one drawback - pneumonia.

Charlaine made wedding plans - was she really harbouring a bun in the oven?

After all those up and down weekends we could not be sure.
